Background

The house was in very bad condition, it was made of clay and bamboo. The house was flooded when it rained. The family owned nothing to value. The parents worked as farmers, they grew rice and corn, yet there was still not enough for the kids to eat. Sometimes, Hai was hired to carry sand and bricks for construction sites around the village in order to earn some extra money. They were below the poverty level, yet the government only gave them a medical insurance card and some small donation at Tet holiday.

In 2015, with the financial support from HSCV, the family decided to build the new house. Since then, they do not have to worry about the leaked roof and torn walls whenever it rains.
